

ATTACHMENT STYLES IN RELATION TO TEACHING & LEARNING

Presented by: Chantel Yeates

Attachment theory is a psychological, evolutionary and ethological theory concerning relationships between humans. The most important principle is that young children need to develop a relationship with at least one primary caregiver for normal social and emotional development.

Chantel Yeates has worked in education for over 20 years, 10 of which as a school leader, with experience in both secondary and SEND settings. She has a passion for helping to get the very best out of pupils by understanding their world and tactics that those around them can use to support them in achieving this.

During the session you will explore:

- the risks and protective factors for the four different patterns of attachment.
- the world view and life-long challenges faced by a person with the four attachment styles.
- what to expect in respect of social-emotional and cognitive development in children and young people who live with an insecure style of attachment.
- evidence-based approaches to school management of pupils who have Insecure attachment styles.
